Understanding the Decade Golf System

The Decade Golf System, an acronym for Distance, Expectation, Correction, Attack, Defense, and Execute, is a comprehensive approach to golf that emphasizes statistical analysis, strategic decision-making, and emotional control. Here's a closer look at its components:

- Distance Control: Understanding and utilizing one's average shot distances to make more intelligent club selections.

- Shot Dispersion: Acknowledging the natural variance in shot accuracy and planning shots with that variance in mind.
- Emotional Resilience: Managing the psychological aspects of the game, focusing on decision-making rather than outcomes.

At the core of the Decade System is a database of golf shot outcomes analyzed through a statistical lens, offering insights into probabilities that guide players on when to be aggressive and when to play it safe. Fawcett's approach demystifies the game's strategic aspects, providing a clear framework for decision-making on the course.
